Text:

"House, wall, plan(et): these are cells within a narrative tissue of habitation, focusing on people and community. Through a collaborative process, Roxana Donaldson and Cristina Irian (re)visit fragments of personal history across five currently uninhabited spaces, recovering an absence of material culture from diverse historical communities.

The artists establish a connection with the past through a documentary-artistic approach, accessing the memory of uninhabited spaces with simultaneous references to house exteriors and interiors, gardens, and flora. The diversity of narrative structures and working mechanisms is underpinned by an attempt to bridge past and present, old and new, and specifically, urban and peripheral spaces—all connected by the intent to restore a sense of community.

Produced by CESI (Center of Excellence in Image Studies) in partnership with the 'Brâncoveanu Palaces at the Gates of Bucharest' Cultural Center – Mogoșoaia."
